HEY YOU GUYS! It is hard to believe The Goonies was released 30 YEARS AGO! As a community, we've enjoyed watching the film's rise to cult status and hope you enjoy your visit to our town. Astoria and Oregon's north coast are ready to share with you not only our courtship with Hollywood, but also the many other gems that make our home special: nationally significant history, beautiful natural scenery, a hopping culinary and craft-brewing scene, a myriad of recreational opportunities, and much more.

You're in for a fun, memorable weekend. The 30th Anniversary is positioned to be our biggest yet, with new activities this year, in addition to traditions formed at past anniversary celebrations. With so much to see and do, it can be a little overwhelming, so let this program—along with our website—serve as your guide for the next four days.

Aside from filming locations, treasure hunts, behind-the-scenes discussions, and record-setting mass Truffle Shuffles, there is so much in our area, and we hope you'll visit again to take it all in. Thank you so much for being here.

Skip Hauke, Executive Director
Astoria Warrenton Area Chamber of Commerce

We also wish to thank our countless event partners, including businesses, organizations, and individuals, who have provided services above and beyond the call of duty to make this celebration a success.

Curt is delighted—even joyous—to once again be involved in an anniversary celebration for The Goonies, a film that continues to amaze him with its longevity! THANKS, GOONIES FANS!

An alumnus of the Oregon Shakespeare Festival, Curt arrived in Portland in 1970, where he has appeared in over 50 stage productions, including Long Day's Journey into Night, Camelot, and Our Town, and recently as Lear in King Lear. In 1981 Curt joined SAG-AFTRA, and has had supporting roles in 16 film, TV, and media projects, including Take My Advice, NBC's miniseries Dead by Sunset, and the pilot for an upcoming web series, Camp Abercorn.

A native Oklahoman, Mark began his career in 1978 at CPC Associates, a veteran visual-effects house in Hollywood. Mark worked at both Lucasfilm and Amblin Entertainment on a varied slate of projects, including Star Wars: Episode V—The Empire Strikes Back, Raiders of the Lost Ark, The Goonies, and Back to the Future.

In 1989, Mark joined Donner Shuler-Donner Productions as a production representative on HBO's hit series Tales from the Crypt. He was associate producer on Warner Bros.' seminal 1992 family film Free Willy and its sequels. In addition to his producing responsibilities, he supervised all postproduction and visual-effects work on the trilogy. In 2002, Mark and his brother, Mike, formed River Rock Entertainment to develop and produce entertainment designed to entertain, enlighten, and inspire. The company is currently completing postproduction on a historical documentary, Remember the Sultana, and developing several feature film projects.

After a 30-year career in the entertainment industry as an actor, stuntman, stunt coordinator, second unit director, director, script doctor, and scriptwriter, Randell retired with his wife to their horse-rescue ranch in the foothills of California's Central Valley. Randell didn't start out wanting a career in the film industry. In fact, that was the furthest occupation from his mind when he joined the Marine Corps in 1965. After he was wounded twice in Vietnam, the Marine Corps sent him to Stanford University to become an officer and to study civil engineering. During one summer, he was stationed at the American embassy in Madrid. Within weeks, he was recruited into the exploding Spanish/Italian film industry. As a 6'5" American who had ridden horses most of his life, he fit right into the Eastwood spaghetti-western genre, which was in vogue at that time.

PATRICK LINES

GOONIES CONNECTION:
On set during filming on Oregon coast

Writer/director/actor Michael Alderman began his career in the late 1970s by producing a number of stop-motion animated short films. In college he enrolled in every class offered within his chosen field, earning an associate of arts degree with an emphasis on film and television production. While there, he wrote and directed the Halloween episode of the weekly children's cable TV program Captain Cidd's Castle. He also became involved with the college's drama department, where he learned the craft of collaborating with actors to tell a story.

In 1984 he was invited by director Richard Donner to observe firsthand the shooting of the Warner Bros. feature The Goonies while the production was on location in Michael's hometown of Astoria, Oregon. Donner memorably introduced him to executive producer Steven Spielberg as a "fellow director." Michael later published a book-length memoir detailing the experience, titled Three Weeks with the Goonies.

Paul Gillum is currently a fine art sculptor of bronzes and paintings and owner of Studio-B in Astoria, Oregon. During the filming of The Goonies Paul was a detective with the Astoria Police Department, assigned to assist Warner Bros. staff as the liaison to the City of Astoria. Paul assisted the film's staff with finding locations, hiring location persons in the film, and providing security personnel for the actors, producers, and directors.

Paul is a collector of Goonies memorabilia and owns the only known black-and-silver work jacket with insignias, which has been worn by Chunk (and there are photos to document it). He has all the daily work sheets used by production, as well as one of the original Astoria maps and a Goonies car plaque personally signed by Steven Spielberg. Since working with The Goonies, Paul has worked with several other production companies on films in and around the Astoria area.

Patrick had a long, distinguished career with the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department. In 1984, he was the park ranger at Ecola State Park when scenes from The Goonies were shot there. He served as the day-to-day liaison between OPRD and the film crew. He was able to provide the crew with some valuable lessons on dealing with weather conditions on the Oregon coast.

He was very interested in the logistics of the shoot and took many pictures of the transformation of the park into a movie set (building the Lighthouse Restaurant, hiding picnic tables in plain sight, making a bicycle appear to ride alongside a car, etc.). Over the years those pictures were rarely seen by anyone other than his daughter and her friends. Several of his pictures have been enlarged and laminated, and he will share them with visitors at Ecola during the celebration.

STORIES FROM THE SET OF THE GOONIES

BY RANDELL WIDNER

THE CUTTING OF THE SAIL

From the first day of preproduction, Steven Spielberg had me over on the Universal Studios lot at his private office complex, Amblin, which has a private theater with a huge library of films from the very beginning of the first talkies. I was assigned to screen all of the classic pirate films and to make a list of all of the classic stunts that we might incorporate into The Goonies.

In the 1926 film The Black Pirate, legendary stuntman Richard Talmadge (doubling actor Douglas Fairbanks Sr.) sits on a cross spar and then jumps over to stick his dagger into the sail and lower himself to the deck below, ripping the fabric as he goes. This was considered one of the greatest stunts ever filmed. In investigating how they did it, we found that the cross spar and the sail were only six feet off the ground. They used an airplane engine and propeller to make the sail billow while it was sitting on the ground. The sail was precut and lightly stitched back together.

This was very troubling for us, as this method would never work for The Goonies. We were in a cave, so we would need a huge area to lay down a bluescreen on our sound stage, where the ship was already being built and the destruction of the sound stage floor was already underway to create the lagoon. We would have had to find another sound stage for the shot, and that would have taken months to secure, which was unacceptable.

During a meeting, Steven, special effects coordinator Matt Sweeney, and I decided to design a way to actually cut the Velcroed sail while it was standing up, from the top of the spar to the ship's rail. Matt invented an amazing machine called the Descender, which controlled my speed while I cut the sail (which was the major consideration he needed to overcome). We also designed the swing from the top of the cave onto the sail. Lighting the entire sound stage became very problematic, so the swing onto the ship was not shot for the film.

Now that I've told you the backstory, I want to tell you about the special event that Steven had to honor the great old film stuntmen. He invited more than twenty legendary stuntmen and stuntwomen and the Hollywood superstar elite to witness the first cutting of the sail. We had more than sixty people on the sound stage to witness me swinging from the top of the cave more than eighty feet, stabbing and transferring to the sail, cutting down through it, and then again grabbing the rope and swinging across the deck. This special event was the only time we did this whole sequence without stopping.

(top) I interviewed for Sloth before John "Big Tooz" Matuszak, but Richard Donner wanted John. I stayed on as the stunt double. John and I worked really well together. In fact, during the year I spent on The Goonies I never heard anyone get angry or confrontational. Of my 127 films, this was by far my best experience.

(above) This is a photo of me in my stunt mask. We were clowning around before we did the run-through of the sail-cutting stunt. My experience being Sloth was the best of my thirty-year career. Loved every minute.

SAVE THE GOONDOCKS!

You are here to see where The Goonies was filmed, and we want you to have a good time doing it. There is something special about standing on the same ground that you've seen in the movie and becoming a part of the scene. We just ask that you remember this is a real town, and our residents, businesses and property owners still need to go about their daily lives. Please be extra courteous and mindful of your impact on those around you, and visitors will continue to be welcomed with open arms. Your help in making this a positive experience for both fans and residents alike is greatly appreciated.

When visiting the "Goonies House," please park at Astor Elementary School or below the school at Columbia Fields, accessible directly from Highway 30. The less than a third of a mile walk will take you past two other film locations. You can take a great photo of the house and its surroundings from the field or the Riverwalk trail adjacent to the East Mooring Basin.
